

Trails Development, Planning, and Compliance

Throughout Upper Midwest

Trails not only connect us to other locations but to nature, history, and different people. Over the past 16 years, the 106 Group has worked with many public and private organizations to support the development of trails through cultural resources compliance and interpretive planning. The results of these investigations can be used as a tool for planning and ensuring that vulnerable cultural resources are not compromised during the construction of the trail. With our knowledge of the cultural and historical resources that complement the natural beauty of the trail and our interpretive planning expertise, we are able to transform facts and resources into meaningful visitor experiences that enhance the public's understanding of our shared heritage.

Our work experience ranges from trails winding through small parks to trail systems traversing an entire county or counties. A selected list of our cultural resources management and interpretive planning experience for trails is provided below:

- Bruce Vento Trail, St. Paul, Ramsey County
- Coon Rapids Trail, Anoka County
- Gunflint Trail, Grand Marais, Cook County
- Dakota County Parks System Plan
- Fair Ridge Trail, Fort Ridgely National Register Historic District, Renville and Nicollet counties
- Faribault County Unity Trail
- Gitchi Gami Trail, Gooseberry Falls to Split Rock Connector, Lake County
- Hutchinson Spur Bike Trail, St. Louis Park
- Lake Wobegon Trail, Stearns County
- Lower Phalen Creek Trail, St. Paul, Ramsey County
- Moose Lake Recreational Trail, Carlton County
- New Ulm Bicycle Trail, Brown County
- Rice Creek Trail Interpretive Concept Plan, Anoka County
- Big Rivers Trail, Dakota County

